

HOLLOWAY DIAMONDS

Precious Metals

In 1976, 40 years ago, when I opened Precious Metals there were no shops with gemologists and jewellers working under one roof. Custom made jewels often bore no resemblance to the salespersons description or sketch. Today most of our talented team have been with me for more than a decade and have a wide range of complementary skills.

Renaming, 8 years ago, as Holloway Diamonds reflects mine and our client's passion for diamonds. I invented several widely used diamond cut tools and international patents with the help of my geology education and the learning that one acquires by teaching valuers and gemologists about diamonds. Because those tools are integrated into Holloway Diamonds we offer you the most sparkling brilliant diamonds the world has to offer.

We are a family business, not just because my daughter works here. Many clients are children or grandchildren of clients and we have shared in many special moments by making family heirlooms marking many special family occasions.

The key to HD's success is the quality and value of our diamonds. Buying diamonds is not simple and the Internet is full of contradictory information. Diamond grading certificates use jargon to enable sales of ugly diamonds that should have been used industrially - not in rings. For example the left half of this image shows a dull hazy diamond; GIA independent grading certificates for both these diamonds are the same grades.

The dull left half image of a diamond has the same grade as the sparkling right side stone.

Our Workshop: the engine room of Holloway Diamonds

Holloway Diamonds began as Precious Metals in 1976. Garry's founding vision was to combine a full complement of skills and expertise to provide our clients with an exceptional jewellery experience. Our design consultants, gemmologists, master jewellers, and valuers all work together to provide this specialised service. Today more than half of the jewellery we make is custom designed and crafted to our clients wishes; an amazing testament to his original concept.

Over the decades we have maintained a commitment to provide exceptional service through education and adaptation, utilising the combined knowledge and skills of old and new. Today we combine age old bench techniques with CAD (computer aided design). Our in house workshop allows us to repair, remodel or create a piece that is tailored to your individual needs on the premises. Additionally we can remelt all the old gold sitting in drawers and craft a beautiful wearable piece.

Throughout these years we have built and maintain lasting relationships with those who have enjoyed our services, assisting them to create pieces and collections that celebrate the milestones in their lives. Making jewellery as lasting symbols of celebration and love, possible heirlooms to pass on.

Our showrooms in Canterbury and Brighton are open from 9.30am to 5pm Monday to Friday and from 9am to 4 pm on Saturdays.

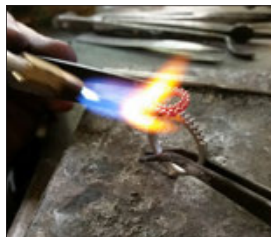

Expert sales consultants interpret your design ideas and then work closely with our jewellers to manage your project.

We source from a large inventory of exceptional diamonds or meet your requirements from local or overseas suppliers.

We will make your piece entirely by hand or with the latest computer aided design (CAD also enables a rendered image).

Award winning jewellers assist in the design process and work with your consultant to ensure accurate interpretation.

Your finished piece will exceed your expectations. If not we guarantee to remake it until you are satisfied.
